

BOSS GIBSON:

Lumber King of New Brunswick

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

First and foremost, to my wife, Beth Campbell, a distant relative of the Boss, who came up with the idea and kept a steady interest in it through five years of research. Tیره Macgregor applied his editorial expertise to several chapters. Margot Sackett brought to my attention important articles by Parks Canada on Marysville's historic status, in particular the Nob Hill houses, River Street houses and Cotton Mill. Judge David Dixon spoke at length of the Gibson family in its later incarnations, after the death of the patriarch. Mary Greenlaw of Waweig related an intriguing connection between the Gibsons of this book and those of Charlotte County generally. Mary Doon of NBCC St. Andrews ordered in material otherwise difficult to access. The Timber Trades Journal delved deep to locate an obscure special issue on the Gibson lumber empire.

Thanks also to the New Brunswick Museum, Provincial Archives of New Brunswick, the Charlotte County Archives, Harriet Irving Library, and to Library and Archives Canada.

A special thanks to Ron Such of Friesens, my point man for five books and always a great pleasure to work with.

BOSS GIBSON:

Lumber King of New Brunswick

David M. Sullivan

2015

To Beth

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Chapter One: Lumbering on the St. Croix and Lepreau	7
Chapter Two: A River to Himself	27
Chapter Three: The New Brunswick Railway	47
Chapter Four: The Marysville Cotton Mill	72
Chapter Five: The Canada Eastern Railway and Fredericton Railway Bridge	87
Chapter Six: Summit of Empire	100
Chapter Seven: Marysville	115
Chapter Eight: The Nashwaak Potentate	130
Chapter Nine: End of an Era	146
Bibliography and Index	160

Alexander "Boss" Gibson, c. 1900
PANB Assorted Photo Acquisitions #4: P37-488-2.